NOTES:

- Departmental means and percentages have been calculated as the average of all the individual course means and percentages (rather than from the individual responses for the department which would result in large classes unduly influencing the results).
- The numbers quoted are actual numbers of respondents.
- Standard Deviation is a measure of the degree to which the responses varied for each question. A smaller value suggests a higher level of agreement among the respondents.
- The graphical symbols represented as Centiles are decoded as: << (0-10) < (10-30) > (70-90) >> (90-100) in which the number designates the percentile of the class mean in relation to the sector.
- The lowest and highest mean for a course in this department is for the current semester.
- The value for sector mean columns have been calculated as the average of all the individual course means.
